

Privacy Policy

Horwood Marcus & Berk does not collect personally identifying information from visitors to this site unless this information is directly provided by the visitor or through the visitor's browser. Horwood Marcus & Berk will not use information provided through your use of this site except to respond to seminar registrations and direct inquiries and/or to measure and analyze website traffic to hmblaw.com. Information relating to use will not be provided or sold to third parties.

Currently we employ only a "cookie" (which is a file written to the visitor's computer that is used by some websites for record keeping or to remember certain information about visitors) for more accurate anonymous traffic analysis such as tracking the time/date of the visit, the page viewed and the referring website. This cookie does not include personal information such as name, age, phone number, e-mail address or mailing address. The data that we do collect is never stored in any individual profile and only serves to update aggregate counts allowing us to monitor site traffic. Most browsers are initially set up to accept cookies. If you would prefer, you can set your browser to reject cookies.

Horwood Marcus & Berk reserves the right to change the aforementioned policy regarding cookies and the collection of information at any time, without advanced warning to user of our site. Should any new policy go into effect, Horwood Marcus & Berk will post it on this site, and the new policy will apply only to information collected thereafter. Visitors will be able to "opt out" of our collection of any personally identifying information under any such policy.